

James Craig

James has been an employee of Franklin County for more than five years. During his time here, he has demonstrated exemplary job performance and commitment to the agency. For eight months, while the finance department was without a deputy director, James ran the department successfully. He also acted in several positions while the department was short staffed including, the Invoice and Payables Supervisor. He supervised two line supervisors assuring that weekly child care, PRC and agency payments were completed and paid on time. He also served as the liaison for all AOS audits prior to the hiring of the agency auditor. In addition to his added responsibilities, James developed several cost-saving measures by looking at ways to fund operational costs when the agency received budget reductions in 2008. The agency has been able to sustain $7 million in cuts and live with our funding limits because of James' hard work. He is always willing to learn new things and create new processes during challenging times. He continues to hone his managerial and supervisory skills while demonstrating good leadership potential. In addition to being an excellent employee, James is a wonderful father and family man.
